

Describe one aspect of the culture in the country

Recently Canada is well known as a mixed-culture. However they have a traditional culture of Canadian aborigines. I want to talk about aboriginal culture. I went to the museum that shows history of Canadian aborigines. There were many cultural things so I could learn Canadian culture a lot.

According to the Canadian constitution, there are three types of aborigines which are first nations, Metis and Inuit. Their culture was related to land, life and spirit. They respected living things a lot. According to them, people are related to the natural world and also people are participants to inner space.

They had a representation of status and privilege. It is called “totem pole.” I saw it at the park. It was carved animal-shaped or humans-shaped. (Picture!)

enjoyed art. I saw a beautiful painting on the wall. They made beautiful clothes and shoes, too. Children enjoyed playing with their toys.(picture)

They lived in a house like a tent. I saw it at the school and museum.(picture)

It was interesting to know how Canadian aborigines lived. I didn't know about them before I went to the museum. I learned how beautiful their history is. I also learned their sad history. Their spirits were ruined by aggression of French. It's sad because their spirits were so great.

I thought I should learn more about them. I hope people will never forget that Canadian aborigines' history and spirits.
